JAILED FOR IDLENESS

Man Said He Would Not Work During Rest of Life.

Troy, July 15.—William O'Connell, a well-known character in the southern wards, was sent to jail for three months this morning by Justice Byron when convicted on a charge of violating the anti-loafing law. When asked by Justice Byron how long it was since he worked O'Connell stated it was twenty-six years. He said at that time he had a good job and another man was given the position "for no reason." He vowed then, so he asserted, that he would never work again. O'Connell said he had registered with the sheriff that he was an idler, and believed that he did not have to work after doing this.
